Scholarship Fund Honors Dr. Jacobs

A scholarship fund, with initial gifts of $20,500, is being established at Presbyterian College in memory of the late Dr. Thornwell Jacobs by his five children.

Contributing to the Thornwell Jacobs Memorial Scholarship Fund are these children: Thornwell Jacobs, Jr., and Dr. John Jacobs, both of Atlanta; H. Fred Lesh, Jr., of Whittier, Calif.; and Mrs. Olsen (Harriet) Field and Mrs. Herman (Maude) Koester, Jr., both of Weston, Mass.

Others Urged to Make Additions

The donors hope that additions will be made in the future to this fund, and they urge other friends and admirers of Dr. Jacobs to join in this project to provide scholarship aid to needy, worthy students.

President Marshall W. Brown, in announcing the fund, said the memorial will stand as a fitting tribute to a man of outstanding achievement in his own right, whose father founded Presbyterian College and whose family has been closely associated with the institution since that date.

Alumnus Excelled in Many Fields

An alumnus of PC in the class of 1894, Thornwell Jacobs achieved prominence as an educator, author and minister before his death at 79 on August 4, 1956. He was founder and president of Oglethorpe University, and he wrote numerous books of prose and poetry, including the Red Lanterns on St. Michael's.

President Brown said the donors had provided that M. S. Bailey and Son, Bankers, of Clinton act as trustees to invest the funds and to give the income annually for scholarships.

Children Also Gave Library Collection

Dr. Brown pointed out the children of Dr. Jacobs only recently gave PC their father's extensive library collection. It included more than 4,000 volumes, some 1,000 being stock copies of his books from which the College may receive royalties upon sale.

PC Students Plan Diverse Careers

Diversity is the keyword on careers planned by Presbyterian College's 520 students, according to a recent campus survey.

Business and the ministry lead the list as the most popular of the 30 occupations toward which members of the student body are now heading. This preference is in keeping with the choices indicated by PC men for the past several years.

A total of 114 students, or 22 percent of the group, plan to enter the various fields of business. The ministry has 62 candidates, representing about 14 percent of the total.

Teaching and medicine follow the two leaders, and engineering, law and other forms of science also are popular.

There are 49 prospective teachers now at Presbyterian, while 23 others plan to do some teaching in connection with planned coaching careers. Thirty-one plan to enter medicine as physicians or dentists, while scientific careers in chemistry, physics and biology beckon 17 others.

Fifteen students plan to be lawyers after graduation, ten are interested in engineering, and social work and journalism attract eight and six respectively.

Among the other career choices by present members of the PC student body are: Agriculture, aviation, animal training, government work, mortician, optometry, psychology, pharmacy, professional baseball and veterinary medicine.

Foster Scholarship Receives Addition

Another addition to the Foster Scholarship at Presbyterian College was announced today by President Marshall W. Brown.

He said Miss Mary Emma Foster of Union, S. C., has added another $1,000 to the fund which has provided financial assistance to worthy and deserving PC students for the past 25 years.

President Brown pointed out the Foster family of Union had contributed through the years to this fund which is a part of the College's permanent endowment. Income from the invested fund provides annual scholarship aid.

In acknowledging Miss Foster's latest gift, Dr. Brown made an observation which applies generally to all scholarship donors. He said:

"I am confident that your gift will aid many generations of students who otherwise might be unable to have higher education under Christian influences."

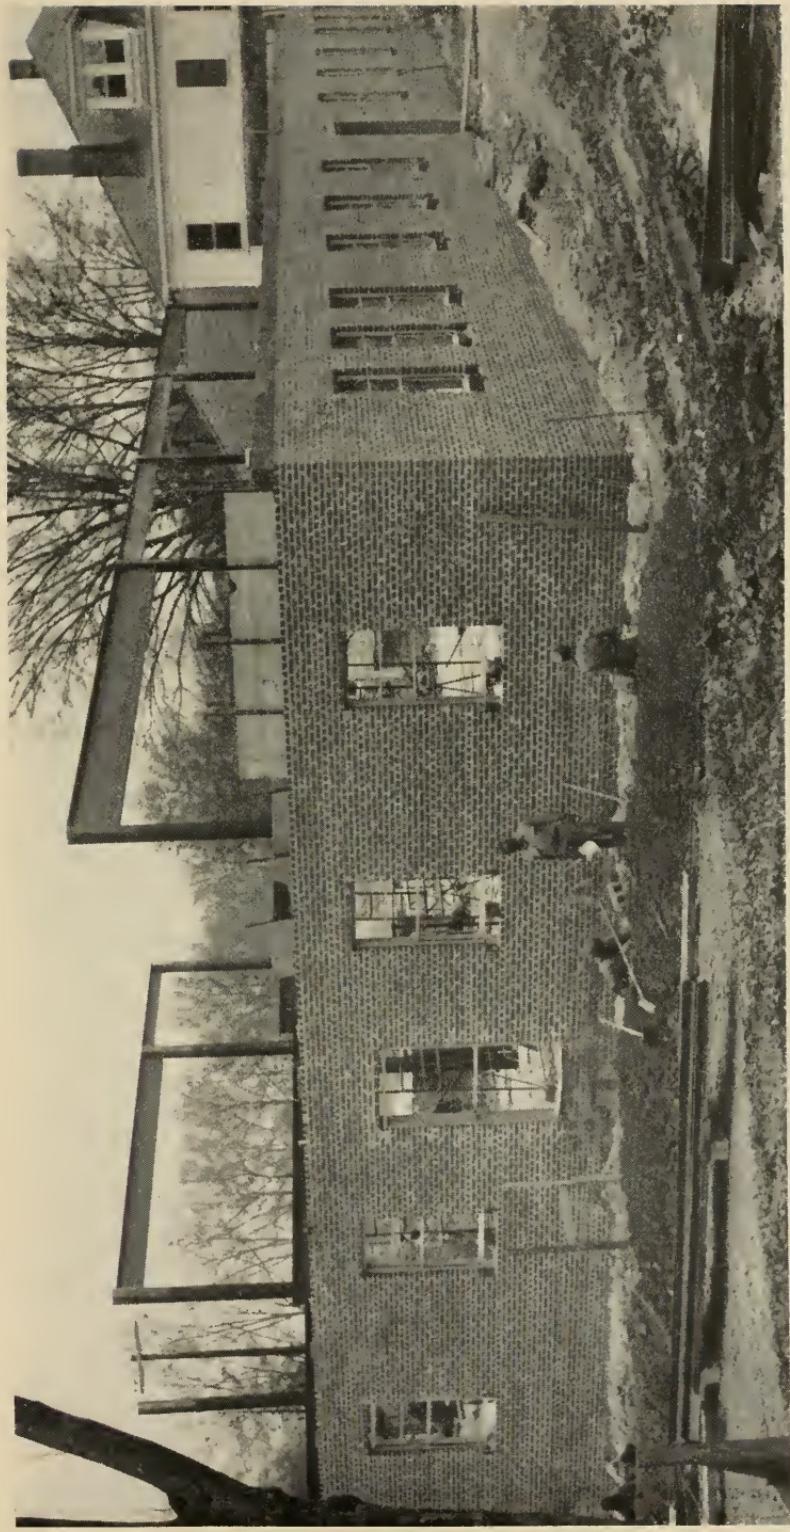

Student Center Work Progresses Steadily

Construction moves forward steadily on Presbyterian College's $250,000 student center, one of the major objectives for which funds were raised in the recent Diamond Jubilee Development program.

The picture on page three shows the progress thus far. Basement, foundation work and exterior walls for the first floor have been completed, and the builders now are engaged in work on the second floor of the all brick, concrete and steel structure.

The student center, expected to be ready for use sometime next May, will include three spacious lounges, snack shop, post office, recreation room, book store and terrace on the first floor. Situated on the second floor will be the guidance center, meeting rooms, offices and guest quarters.

Religious Week Set For March 10-15

PC Director Named To Hall of Fame

Election to the Helms Football Hall of Fame as one of the nation's outstanding gentlemen of sports is the latest honor bestowed upon Presbyterian College Athletic Director Walter A. Johnson.

He received this honor at the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics banquet in St. Petersburg, Fla., on December 20.

Johnson, long acclaimed as the Dean of Southern Sportsmen and already the holder of an honorary doctorate in recognition for his service, was cited by the NAIA for his outstanding contributions to the field of inter-collegiate athletics and for the Christian principals of highest sportsmanship he has instilled in the youth under his influence.

Walter Johnson is now serving his 43rd year as director of the PC athletic program.

Religious Emphasis Week at Presbyterian College will be held on March 10-15 for this school session.

Ten outstanding speakers are being engaged to lead the program, and classes will be suspended for two days during this time so that special attention may be given to this period of religious emphasis.

The Student Christian Association sponsors this annual program at PC. Bill Yearick, a senior from Miami, Fla., who currently serves as SCA president, is in charge of the project and has appointed various student committees to assist him.

Religious Emphasis Week will open with a banquet honoring the main speakers. The program also will include daily inspirational services attended by the entire student body, morning and afternoon discussion groups with students assigned to various groups, and religious "bull sessions" in the dormitories and fraternity quarters at night.
